A short description of the tool and its features. Select a blacklists Clicking on the 'Select Blacklists' button enables you to select a number of anti-spam blacklists from a dropdown list of options. Example 1: I have the Tool installed on an email server. One of the lists I have installed is SpamCop. So clicking on the 'Select Blacklists' button will reveal a list of options containing SpamCop. Each list option is shown with a name and URL. The blacklists it contains are shown underneath. Example 2: I have the Tool installed on an email server. One of the lists I have installed is EmailLabs blacklists. So clicking on the 'Select Blacklists' button will reveal a list of options containing EmailLabs blacklists. Each list option is shown with a name and URL. The blacklists it contains are shown underneath. Import/Export You can import and export any blacklists you have installed. The import/export functionality is similar to the import/export functions you might expect to find in an RSS reader. Features & Bug Reporting You can provide feedback for Anti-Spam Blacklist Thing. You may also wish to provide feedback for the blacklists and their maintainers. Anti-Spam Blacklist Thing is in beta. The beta functionality is limited. In particular, due to concerns regarding security of the blacklists and DNSBLs, it is not possible to import/export and/or perform some actions on the blacklists. Anti-Spam Blacklist Thing is new. Please report any bugs you find. Not all features will be available, and some features are restricted by the blacklists/other users. Currently, one of the following blacklists is selected by default: AOL SpamCop AOL SpamCop Most of the time, that is the only blacklist selected. If you select more than one list, the DNSBL you specified will not be fully instantiated. Upon selecting one of the blacklists, you will be prompted to select a subdomain to filter the listed blacklists by. For example, if you select SpamCop and then select a subdomain, you will only be shown the blacklists in the SpamCop-Blacklist Thing list that contain the domain you specify.

You can use the dropdown list to select a domain. Please only 09e8f5149f

Anti-Spam Blacklist Thing manages four major components: anti-spam.pl This Perl script is the heart of the Anti-Spam Blacklist Thing system. The script scans an IP address or subnet (CIDR mask), for example, foradnews.mydomain.com and checks each of 20 blacklists. It returns the number of IPs that are blacklisted by each blacklist. For example, if 50 out of a 1000 IPs are blacklisted by anti-spam.pl foradnews.mydomain.com, then anti-spam.pl foradnews.mydomain.com is 50% effective. The IP subnet can be dynamically determined by your domain's IP address. If you wish to specify a subnet, set the Subnet parameter to the value to be scanned. For example: Subnet=100.101.102.103 If you enter a subnet mask for the IP you wish to scan, then anti-spam.pl will check that subnet for blacklisted IP addresses. Otherwise, anti-spam.pl will check only the local IP for blacklisted IP addresses. If you wish to include a number of subnets in your search, use the Subnets parameter. For example: Subnets=10.101.102.103,10.101.102.104,10.101.102.105 Anti-Spam Blacklist Thing's database of IPs against blacklists is maintained by redmine and updated daily. blacklist.pl Blacklist.pl is the Perl script that checks the blacklist status for each IP result from anti-spam.pl. It displays the number of blacklisted IP addresses in each blacklist. ip.pl IP.pl is a Perl script that displays the relevant information from the response for each IP result. For example, if there is one IP in the list that is non-blacklisted and another that is blacklisted, it displays these IP addresses in red in the output. The other parameters are for: - remove_bad_ips (default false) If true, removes IPs that are blacklisted by any of the blacklists. - max_name_len (default 10) If a bit string, limits the number of characters in the names in the response file to that value. - tolerance
