

As with previous games in the FIFA series, in FIFA 22, players can control in-game actions by using the D-pad and the buttons on the PS4 controller, or by tapping the touch screen. Other actions are accessible using the new “Move” button, which appears whenever a player moves towards or away from an opponent or when a ball is played in that direction. Once pressed, the “Move” button’s “up” action brings up a menu where players can decide how to pass the ball or perform a tackle; they can also control whether they want to play their pass towards a teammate or play to the nearest open teammate (Top, Short, Long or “any”). More complex elements can be controlled by the “HyperMotion” button, which appears above the Move button on the PS4 controller. Here, players can perform everything from passing the ball around players to adjusting the settings of the game. A new “Setup” button also appears, allowing players to configure aspects of the game such as the difficulty level or the controls, as well as view a detailed “Overview” mode to see exactly how the game is progressing. FIFA 22 also introduces “Drive,” a new online-only feature. In “Drive,” players in groups of two or three compete against each other in FIFA 22’s new “Forge” mode, a mode of play that only requires one controller and a PS4 to run. The mode also features “Forge Teams,” which allows groups of three or four players to connect online and try to create teams that will perform well in offline matches. “Forge Teams” also introduces a new “Online Battle” match type, in which players compete against each other for a set number of minutes. If players do not have friends that are playing FIFA 22 online, they can also choose a “Single Match” against another PS4 in the same room. PS4’s New Menu Design Players can now customize their FIFA game, along with all of their FIFA games, by visiting the PlayStation 4’s menu. Here, players can select a custom skin for their FIFA game (the dashboard of which contains their most recent global ranking), and they can also access any of their personal trophies, configure the settings on their PS4 and set-up the profile of their online
