KnowlEdge Educational K12 is an invaluable educational program that can assist you in the process of managing every aspect of your school. With it, you can easily set the attendance of students and workers and keep track of any kind of activity. Furthermore, it includes an accounting module that will allow you to track fees and keep an eye on the funds of your school. With the KnowlEdge K12 educational management program, you will be able to track attendance, student grades, and activities as well as review and repair technical data. KnowlEdge K12

Educational Management software is designed for educational institutions of all types including traditional schools, colleges, and universities. Math app in the homeschool space, including (if available) parent/student portals, was a promising idea. Unfortunately, K12 chose to go in a different direction by creating its own systems and not participating in the Gmat Mobile subforum. Gmat Mobile was mentioned as a new track (and I do believe we should discuss the space) but not a direct post by "K12" (aka "K12 Educational". I fully expect the "Alliance" to come along and create their own subforum. We have spend countless hours discussing what to do with the K12 work and how to get the subforum started. There is no question that it is a little hectic in the Gmat community. We want to avoid a K12 subforum and figure out our own way of doing things. Gmat Mobile was mentioned as a new track (and I do believe we should discuss the space)

The Parent/Student Portal forum is a new forum to discuss the issue of the more platform-agnostic approach that may best suit the needs of the Gmat eLearning programs. There is no definite way to know what direction the developers may take their programs. But since there is no specific forum created yet and the method K12 has chosen is an already existing platform with well established users from other forums (think K12's own forums and the K
