of Necessity as Potency, Intelligence & Simple Self-Knowledge Ruction: The Golden Tablet of Necessity as Potency, Intelligence & Simple Self-Knowledge by Chuang Tzu He who understands necessity has attained to ecstasies. He who understands the virtues is already great. He who has knowledge of the Self can dwell apart from distinctions. If a man's mind is in order, it is as a being that moves through the void. - Chuang Tzu, Book I The sun never injures grass nor moonlight any flowers; The square never leads to crooked ways. It is the wrong use of knowledge and the lack of virtue that causes pain. It is the wrong use of knowledge and the lack of virtue that causes grief. Difficult to recognize in himself is the true and easy man. - Chuang Tzu, Book VII An Introduction to Ruction No, I am not asking an M.D. "give me an honest answer" sort of question. I am trying to understand something, and I have a feeling that you have the ability to help me with that. Ruction is one of those subjects that I probably would not have known about the existence of, except for what is heard outside the school. How many of us know of the existence of "mind training", "thought control", "mind work", "self-education" or "awareness technique"? To just pick one of these terms to label something, is all we need to do; it is like asking what is my religion. When we ask someone that question, we mostly receive answers like Buddhism, or Christianity, or Islam. You just gave me an answer to my religion question, not what it means. Regardless of what is labeled, the object of the technique I am about to describe is found everywhere, and is very powerful. Please use this term correctly, and you will be helping to spread the word: mind training. Let's start back before the invocation of "mind training", then. When you think of the arts, you might think of painting, sculpture, or music. Perhaps you picture an artist in the sun living in a beautiful big city with a big and beautiful house. You picture the
