Q: How can I make a "dynamic" xpath? This is a super simple question (aside from working out the logic), but I'm having problems with this trivial thing. I have an XML document with the following form: 1 hey 2 sup 3 wut 4 nice So I want to grab the name of the tag with the maximum comment count. The answer is 4, because the number of the tag itself is irrelevant. I'm using the following code: Document xpathDoc = loadDocument(url); // List nodes = xpathDoc.selectNodes("/data/tag[comment()[text()]/text()]/max(..)

Gamesmania (- theQuick Look: Hired Gun (2014) I'm not sure how I feel about my last comments here, but I guess I'm not particularly angry with "Hired Gun", despite my initial impressions. I think I was "sold" on this flick too quickly and, as such, I think I've gotten some bad advice about it

Director131:002010-10-16T20:23:40Zfeature review: survival game Fatal Vacation

A new survival game based on the scenario of the movie Fatal Vacation. You will carry out the operations of a killer looking for the lost hunter. Shooting procedures and other operations, you have to carefully manage as you hunt from the high canopy of trees.

It is not long ago, a reckless and evil hunter "Hawk" disappeared in the hills. The island, which is famous in the world for having no murder case, is now seething with chaos. Although there is an existent town that is called the "The ancient town", people do not talk about the disappearance of the hunter very much. The large steamship arrives, and when the ferry pier, you can see the police armed with enormous weapons. After the transfer of the island, more than 20 citizens also vanished. The sound of the rifle shots echoes, and the questions fill your mind. The police investigate, and a killer on the island starts to "hunt for the hunter". It is the time to carry out the "Fatal Vacation".

You visit the town and turn into a hired killer for pay. In the city itself, you hunt humans and capture them immediately

Vitamin C and progression of HIV disease: a prospective randomized trial of vitamin C supplementation in HIV-infected individuals. Vitamin C is essential for the production of collagen, which is an important component of cellular integrity and structure. In addition, it is an important antioxidant in protecting against oxidative damage of various molecules. More recently, several researchers have reported that very low levels of vitamin C are associated with progression to AIDS in HIV-infected individuals. The purpose of this study was to assess the effect of vitamin C supplementation on CD4(+) cell loss. A randomized, double-blind, placebo-controlled trial was conducted to assess the effect of vitamin C supplementation on CD4(+) cell loss in HIV-infected individuals. The subjects were randomized to receive either 1,200 mg of ascorbic acid daily or an equivalent placebo for 52 weeks. Laboratory assessment of CD4(+) cell counts was performed at baseline and at intervals. The participants were HIV-infected and had CD4(+) cell counts between 150 and 500/microL. Seventy-eight subjects were included in the analysis. There was no significant difference in CD4(+) cell counts in the two groups at baseline. At the end of the study, the CD4(+) cell counts were 349/microL in the vitamin C group and 354/microL in the placebo group. The difference in mean CD4(+) cell counts between the two groups at 52 weeks was 2.2 cells/microL, with the 95% confidence interval of -28.3 to 30.8 cells/microL. This study does not support the recommendation for vitamin C supplementation in HIV-infected individuals. The role of antioxidants in the treatment and prevention of HIV infection and progression is beyond the scope of this article and has been reviewed by other investigators.
