Arsenic exposure in the drinking water is potentially very high in Pakistan because of the rich minerals of the area. The objective of this study was to determine arsenic speciation in drinking water and arsenic exposure levels in inhabitants of high risk regions of Pakistan in order to mitigate the impact of arsenic on the human health. In this study, 120 samples were collected from the high risk areas of the Pakistan. Total arsenic (t-As), As(V), As(III) were analyzed using Atomic Absorption Spectroscopy (AAS) and Speciation of As was determined using HPLC coupled to ICP-

MS. The overall mean value of t-As was $4.66 \pm 0.4 \mu\text{g L}^{-1}$ while As(III) and As(V) were found to be 1.19 ± 0.09 and $1.51 \pm 0.08 \mu\text{g L}^{-1}$ respectively. In addition to t-As, arsenic species were also determined. The results showed that 73.3% of the samples were within the concentration range of arsenic less than $2 \mu\text{g L}^{-1}$, indicating a low level of arsenic exposure. Oxidation state of arsenic in the water sample was found to be significant in all the regions. The speciation of arsenic was also studied and the results showed the predominance of As(III). Based on results, it is considered that drinking water in Pakistan is safe for human consumption.

The Center for Disease Control found that 97% of US children were “wired.” Beyond pure numbers, the internet has significant implications for religion. Secular media frequently frame Christian media as captive to the right wing. But the right wing does not have the monopoly on media outlets. Twitter’s plan to begin blocking tweets featuring Islamic State of Iraq and Syria (ISIS) tweets was hardly news. But the fact that Twitter’s CEO privately accused them of having “ideological blindness” puts things in a somewhat
