I just watched the film Hallelujah, and I came across a quote by Lucy, Mother of Jesus. "If you're searching for an answer, you're lost." I had always taken the quote to be the difference between knowing God and being lost without God, but the Wikiquote version says At the threshold of the world, Wisdom (Sophia) (called the 'Ancient One' and the 'Ancient One' is the 'Ancient One') as the female principle brings forth the Word (Logos), the Divine Word, out of which the universe is born. In the movie, there is a scene where Lucy encounters several followers of the Ancient path. From what I know about Gnosticism, the followers were looked down upon, and it is unclear if the followers still follow the Ancient path. A: They were all once followers of the Ancient One who was "the Father" before man was created, then they were all turned away and rejected by the Father. If you are "looking for an answer" you are in search of a father and in that you do not belong because you were already a father to start with. The way out of the rejection of all other true fathers is - as it says in the quote - to "find the Word" and listen to it, which requires to become a son and not a daughter. How to find the Word is something they all don't know, but it is also something that is not revealed anywhere and which is not

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a method and apparatus for manufacturing products using a composite billet which consists of a plurality of different metals such as iron and aluminum and which has a cylindrical shape. More particularly, the present invention relates to a method and apparatus for press-shaping and welding the billet into a series of desired products by feeding the billet through a press die.

2. Description of the Prior Art A billet of a material such as iron, aluminum or the like is generally obtained by cooling or solidifying a molten metal having a desired shape, and is used for the manufacture of products by subjecting the billet to various machining processes such as forging, heat-forging and the like. However, since the billet has only a single composition, it is impossible to obtain products having various compositions of different metal parts. In order to overcome this problem, there have been proposed methods of producing products by welding a plurality of billets. In a conventional method of obtaining a product by welding a plurality of billets, a billet is brought into contact with a heated surface of a welding machine, and is welded. However, as this method requires the use of a high temperature welding machine, the welding machine must be cooled to prevent heat damage to the surrounding parts. The provision of a cooling portion makes the apparatus complicated. Further, such an apparatus for welding billets is not suitable for high speed mass production since the billets are fed through the apparatus one by one. In order to obviate the above problems, there has been provided an apparatus in which a billet is fed continuously by an intermittent feeding mechanism and is pressed and fixed by an intermittent pressing mechanism, thereby obtaining various products by welding the billet. The apparatus of this type is, for example, disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 3,119,425. In this apparatus, an unwelded billet is pressed and welded by moving a billet receiver and a press die reciprocally back and forth by a cam mechanism. However, since the press die and the billet receiver are
