Advertisements CensorSupporter Members For some users with low configuration, antivirus software is slow or misbehaves. We don't want to slow down the performance of your laptop or slow down the work you are doing, so we are going to show you how to disable or hide the anti-virus or anti-malware from your desktop.You may also need to turn off your firewall or firewall settings because they may cause problems with the processes. To be more specific, my issue is that after some time when I log in, my desktop seems to load normally but the panels are all closed. I also get a message saying "Cannot create texture for window {0}" I'd like to suggest using Geektool to check whether it's antivirus software causing the problem. I ran the verifier, got an error of "VMware Player (3.x) is not installed in your system, so the test cannot be performed". I had already installed VMware Player (3.x). Thanks for the reply, but the only other option I can think of is that my antivirus software is causing problems? The desktop icon isn't visible and clicking the desktop icon from the taskbar (or the menu) does nothing. By the way, I am also experiencing crashes quite frequently and that is not really an option. Log into your administrator account. Click the start menu. Open the Control Panel. Click Add or Remove Programs. Select "Applications and Features" from the window that opens. Click on the box that is next to Anti-Virus/Security/Anti-Spyware, and select "Turn off". Click OK to exit the Control Panel. You may have to reboot for the changes to take effect. It's a great app! It saved my day.I run a multi-platform antivirus app called Malwarebytes which is great but can't control my own PC. Thanks for the giveaway! App_DataCK Administrators There are few things that I don't like about the new desktop. 1. Desktop icon, its very difficult to locate. My desktop folder is opened with a lot of files and folders, which covers it completely. So it is quite difficult to locate it. I have not installed any new applet on it. But, the icon is still there and taking so much space. 2. Search icons, which are

With KEYMACRO, you can easily find out if your keyboard is broken or not and even give it a quick test to see if it's in working condition. It's simple to use, so you won't get stuck. The program has two main windows that let you do various things. The left one shows you basic info about your keyboard and in the right one you can change the settings of the keyboard. For example, you can choose from a range of 8 different brightness levels and there's even an option to make your keyboard's backlight controllable with a single key. Make any key function with any key The keys on your keyboard can have special functions and you can adjust them with KEYMACRO. You can assign a special symbol to any key, so you can easily press symbols in programs without resorting to third-party keyboard layouts. ADinf32 - An Antivirus that's actually Free! Help and Support, Rating: Basic description Very good antivirus, though it comes with a free and a paid version. It is light and fast, and has some cool features. User reviews JK_Wade 30 November 2014 Simple to Use, With Fast Start-up, Includes Multilingual Support It is as its name says, "ADinf32" and as you might suspect, it is an antivirus software, however, what it is, is actually a client software and companion for its virus scanner. It is a pretty straightforward program with a very limited interface. It requires some sort of manual intervention to start the scan. The start-up takes about 5 seconds, which is a little slower than some other antivirus programs out there, but it has a very simple interface and is very easy to use. It is actually quite comfortable to use, as it does not require much knowledge to get started. The GUI (Graphical User Interface) is plain and uncluttered with the basic controls. It has a few options that are quite easy to understand. The antivirus function is extremely limited in nature, there are just some basic functions that allow you to run a quick scan. There are options to adjust settings, as well as a couple of other basic settings such as automatic/manual updates. There is also a scheduling option to schedule the scan to run on a daily, weekly or monthly basis. The program will scan on the fly, that is it will scan whatever folder you tell it to scan in a real-time basis, and will display the results right away. There is a user setting option for the profile/exclusion settings. This feature can be used to exclude certain files and folders from being scanned. The scanning features are somewhat limited. However, what it does, it does well. It scans for viruses, trojans, adware and spammers, with some of them detecting the ransomware as well. It is available in English, Russian, Portuguese and Spanish. It comes with a very limited manual that you can read if you need to know more about how to use the program.Q: Highlight A Background Image I have two columns. The left column has an image. The right column has some other items, such as a text. I want the background image of the left column to be highlighted when you click the right column. How would I achieve this? Currently I have: HTML Right Column
