I've been using Lightroom for a decade. The biggest hurdle when working with 24-bit, non-destructive color RAW files has never been learning to use the interface. Regardless of my learning curve, Lightroom keeps improving–adding features that make editing faster and easier. If I could choose, I'd like to see Lightroom add a bit more AI to the image reviewing aspect. While we can load in smart previews, we still need to open the image in Photoshop to apply a Exposure adjustment, and yet I've never hated doing that–especially when given the correct information. AI could do the heavy lifting on the review process. Then we could spend our time on applying the correct filter–or, better yet, enjoying processing tons of images. I'm not a pro, but I'd like to use Lightroom in a more artistic fashion–the way other image processing software is used.
